Last month, Damon earned a Grammy nomination for producing WHITE SUN; together they are nominees Best New Age, Ambient or Chant Album with ceremonies. And, on February 3rd, the major motion picture 80 For Brady for which he produced the hit song, Gonna Be You (#6 on the Billboard charts in its 1st week), comes out nationwide and is expected to set the box office on fire with its star power. Damon started his career getting a chance with the late Easy E and his burgeoning group, working on multiple songs with Bone-Thugs-n-Harmony, primarily with Flesh-N-Bone, producing 10 songs for them and having a notable hand in his debut solo album release entitled "T.H.U.G.S." He then went on to work with the group (Bone) producing multiple songs and several solo albums for Krayzie Bone, Flesh N Bone and the Mo Thugs' compilation album, all achieving gold status. Damon then began to work with Beyoncé on multiple projects including her title track for the blockbuster Austin Powers in Goldmember. Simultaneously, Damon hit it off with Pink and found a synergy where they were able to create a new sound and produce their most successful project to date, "Mizundastood," with a record 29 million records sold. In 2009, Damon was sought out to work on music on one of the biggest films at the time, the remake of the classic movie Fame which led to several other box office hits. Damon continued his work in film with his next production from The Lincoln Lawyer (2011) and shortly after, added reality tv to his credits including Holly World and Kendra On Top for six seasons. His foray into filmed entertainment eventually led to the formation of NomaD in 2017, a reggae artist alter ego taking the imprint to Hawaii where he refined its brand, released several popular records and became many of the island's most successful commercial releases. Damon returned to the mainland and started managing his mother, Dionne Warwick, while launching his record label, Kind Music Group. Damon also co-directed the video. The song will be released on February 24 on Dionne and Damon's Kind Music Group label. The "Dionne Warwick: Don't Make Me Over" documentary is currently streaming on HBO Max. Thaddeus M. Bullard a.k.a. WWE, global ambassador Titus, O'Neil is a global entertainer, accomplished athlete, and philanthropist. Bullard went from being a resident of the Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches as a troubled, underperforming young man to being a mentor, role model and honorary Deputy for the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office. Bullard's passion and commitment to not only succeed personally but also to help others succeed is derived from an early seed planted at the Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches, where many invested in him when, in his words, "they had nothing to gain in return." Bullard has meaningfully supported various organizations, locally and globally, by giving of his time, talent, and finances. Although Bullard, a product of a rape, lacked a strong male role model in the home, his commitment to family, most notably his two sons, TJ (17) and Titus (15), are nothing short of remarkable. Bullard's first priority is being a father and role model to his children. For the past ten (12) plus years his "Joy of Giving" holiday event has garnered over 15,000 gifts annually to underprivileged children and families in need throughout the Greater Tampa area. Bullard is a proud member of Omega Psi Phi fraternity incorporated, the president of the Bullard Family Foundation (an organization that provides programs and resources to help build character and improve outcomes in the community) and a member of Revealing Truth Ministries in Tampa, Florida, where he resides.
